MODERN ASTRONOMY

WELCHONS / MEYERHOLZER / PEARSON

You can live each day with the omnipresent thought that tomorrow might never come. But isn't it nice to know that the sun will again gild the morning sky, bringing with him another day of toil, hardships, fun, and friends?

Our lives have been like the stream, directed by various outside forces as the direction of the water is changed by the rocks in the stream. Each of us was channeled in a direction - a lifestyle.
As we enter the sea of life, the influences, obstacles, and acquaintances which have become a part of us have shaped our characters in the past, and now it is up to each of us to live life to its fullest.
God bless this stream.

It's funny how familiar objects take on a special meaning to each of us - an experience, a rendezvous, a symbol of defiance, or simply a part of every day life. These objects are important for they represent a small part of our world. Without them, things wouldn't be the same.

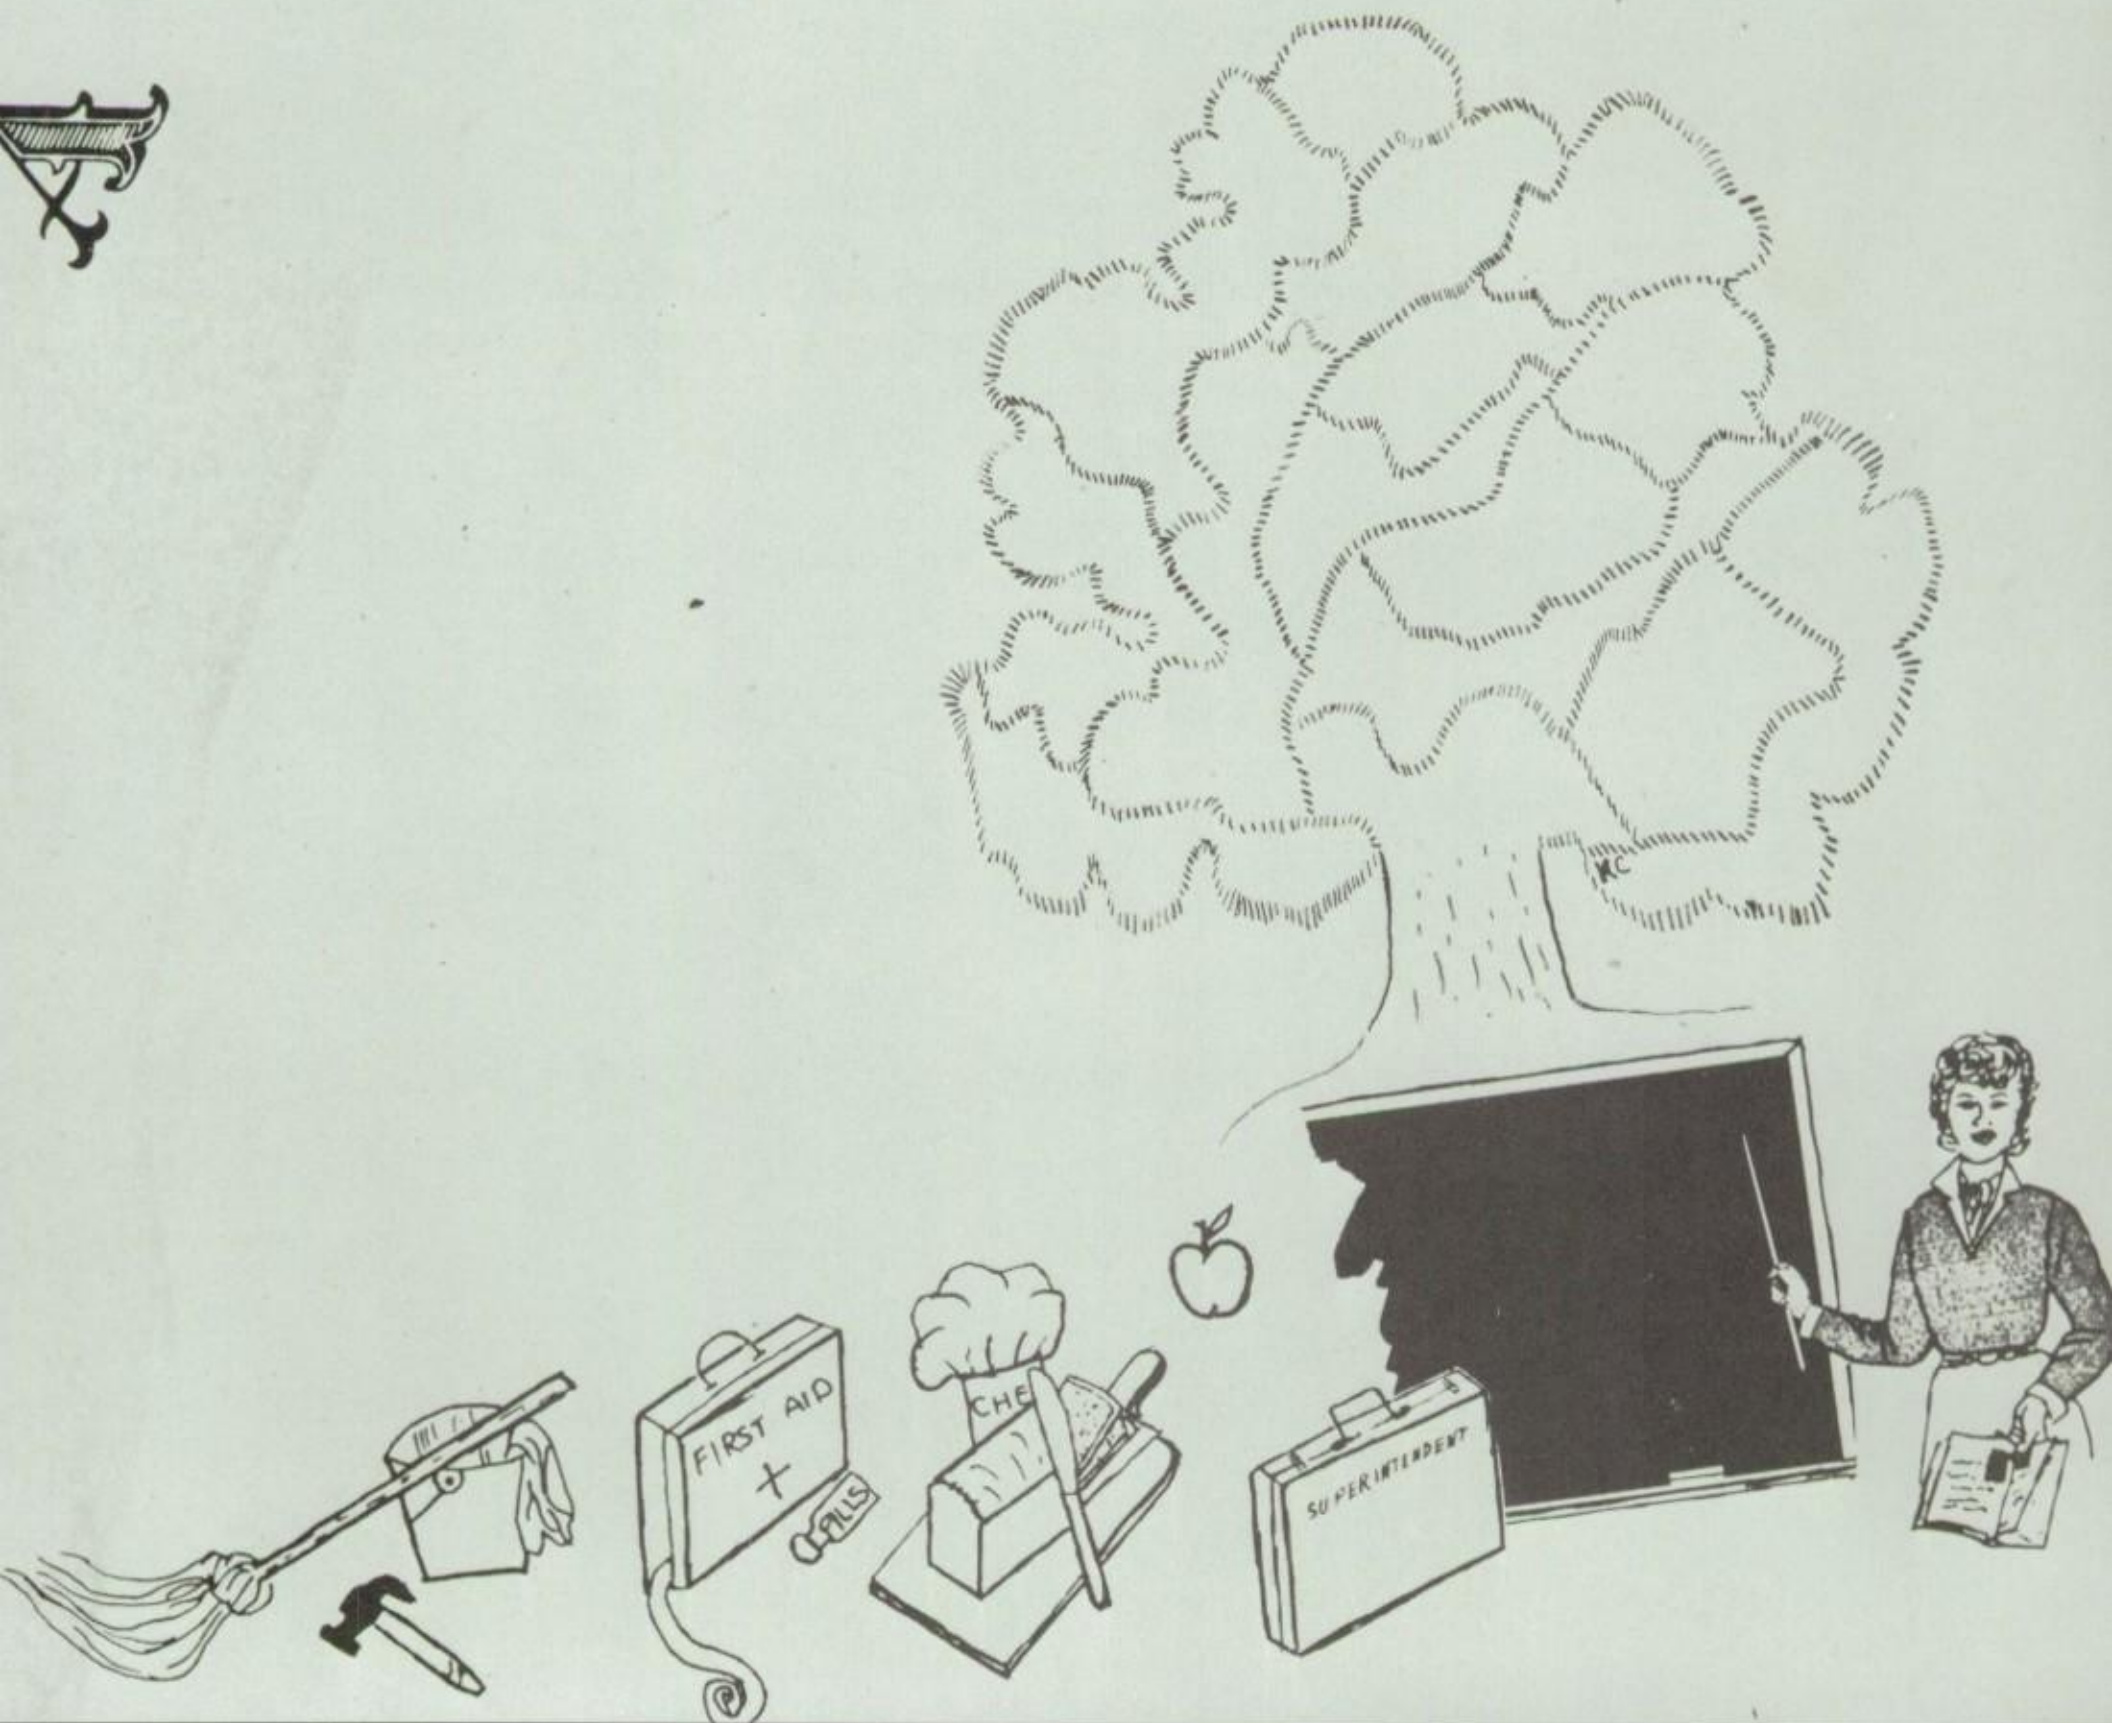

DEDICATION

We, the class of 1975, dedicate this yearbook to the Emma G. Musselman Foundation. Funds provided by this foundation have enabled the students, faculty, staff, and administration of Biglerville High School to enjoy a football field and track constructed in 1947, a gymnasium and equipment given in 1949, a new press box built in 1972, and now a new athletic center which was completed in 1974!

We feel that many times the givers of such generous gifts are not aware of how the people who directly benefit from them - namely, the students of Biglerville High School - appreciate these gestures of goodwill. We'd like to say thank you to all who are associated with the Emma G. Musselman Foundation for the results of all its contributions to our school. We have certainly enjoyed using all of the facilities which you have so bountifully supplied, and so we would like the privilege of dedicating this yearbook to you as a way of saying, "Thank you from the Class of '75."

The staff would also like to challenge all members of our graduating class to remember the generosity of our benefactors and to try to copy their ways as we go through life. Whether it be a giving of material gifts, a putting forth of effort to help other people, or in the giving of ourselves to help preserve the wealth we have in natural resources and in appropriate values for living, the staff challenges you to try to follow the example of the Musselman Foundation and in some way to achieve your goal in the world of tomorrow. And so, Class of 1975, we want you also to feel a part of this dedication.

To Our Advisors:

For the past two years our class has been fortunate to have Mrs. Weaner and Mrs. Celio as class advisors. In the eleventh grade, we found these two people who were willing to give of their time to help us through two of our busiest years.

Because of your genuine interest in our class, we were able to get things together and form a unified group. Without your help and support, the prom, fashion show, apple picking, and Canner hat sales would have been impossible. For all this and for all the hours you've spent with us, we extend a hearty thanks!

Wishing you luck in the future!

An important aspect of our life is almost over and is about to be surmounted by something of greater importance. We are about to send into flight the bird which has been feeding upon the knowledge of its tutors. The time is at wing to glide upon the drifting currents and find again a peaceful canyon wall. Our determination alone allows us to plunge from the steepest precipice in our life to regain flight before plummeting to the world below, for our lifestyles are as different as each windswept snowflake falling to the canyon floor from beyond.

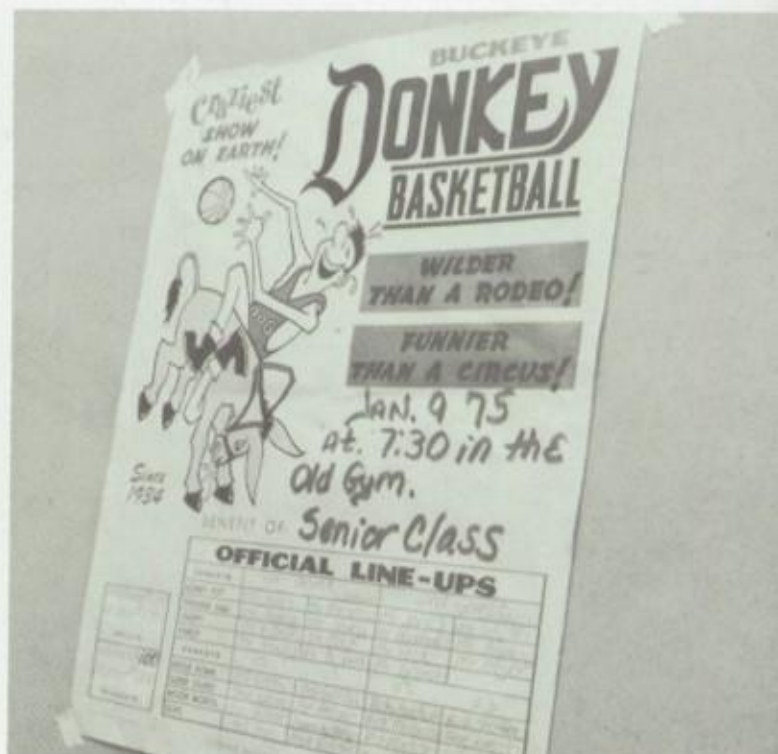

We Will Never Forget . . .

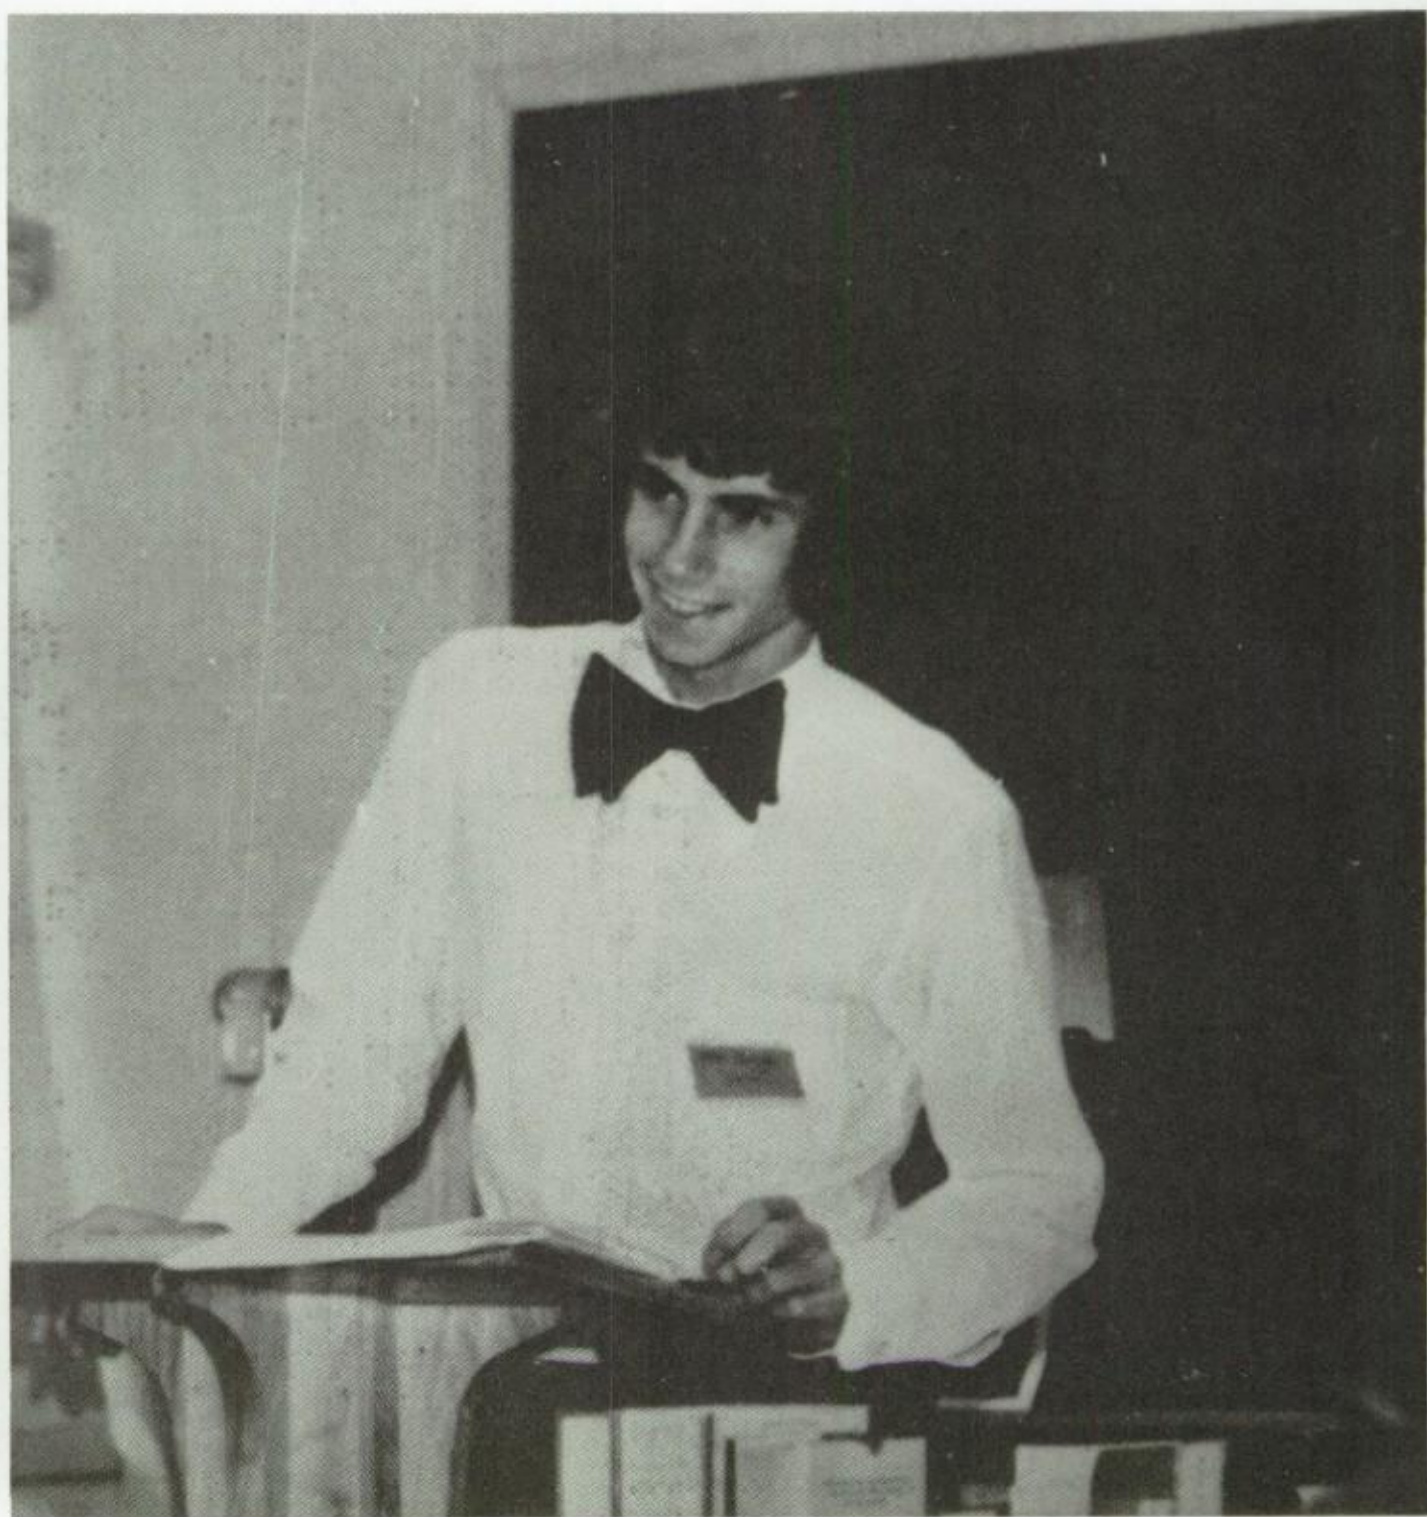

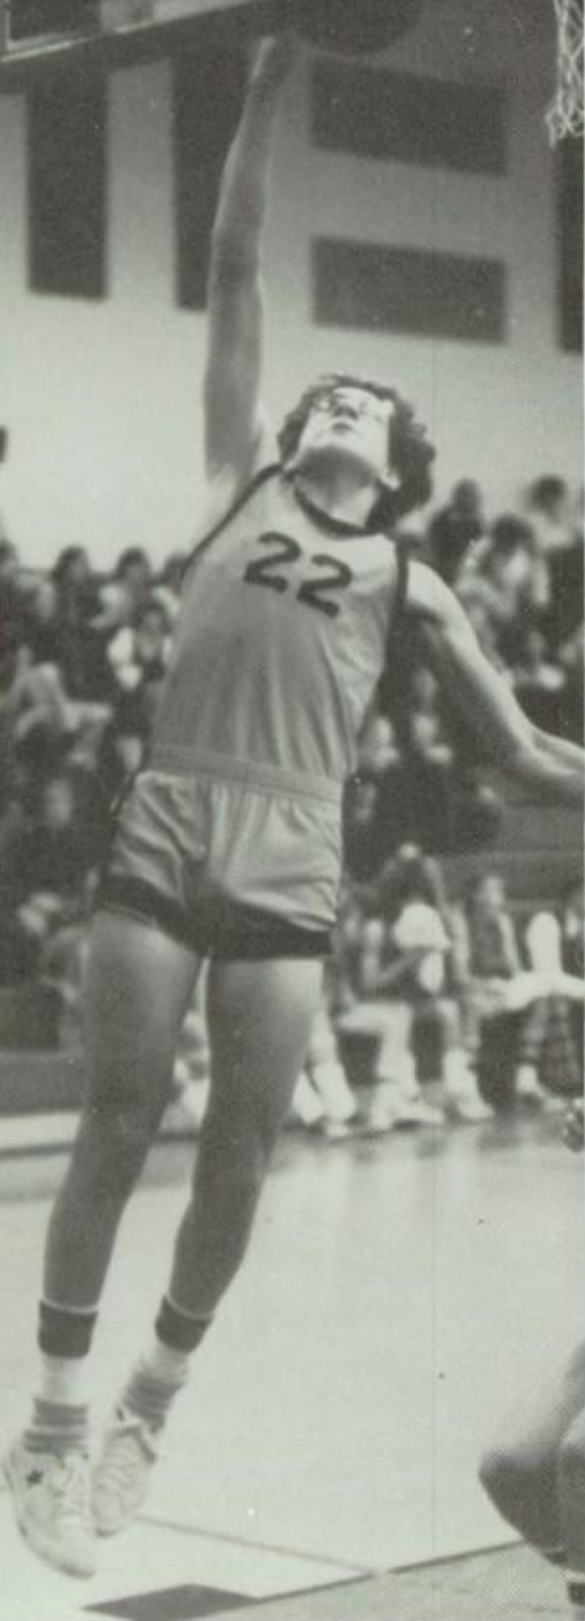

. . . the beauty of life around us. As children, we considered nature as an eternal blessing, but now we are beginning to realize how much of an intricacy nature really is. Mother Nature carries in her haversack the world which is most pure and clean. As we grow older, we begin to hope even more that our peers don't break her back. No crutch could bear the load.

. . . the activities which have kept us out of idleness and into mental and physical actions which complemented our classroom learning. Just as various minerals are needed to help the trees grow, so are these variegated branches of learning needed to implant in us an awareness of other people and help us develop the many talents and skills which we possess.

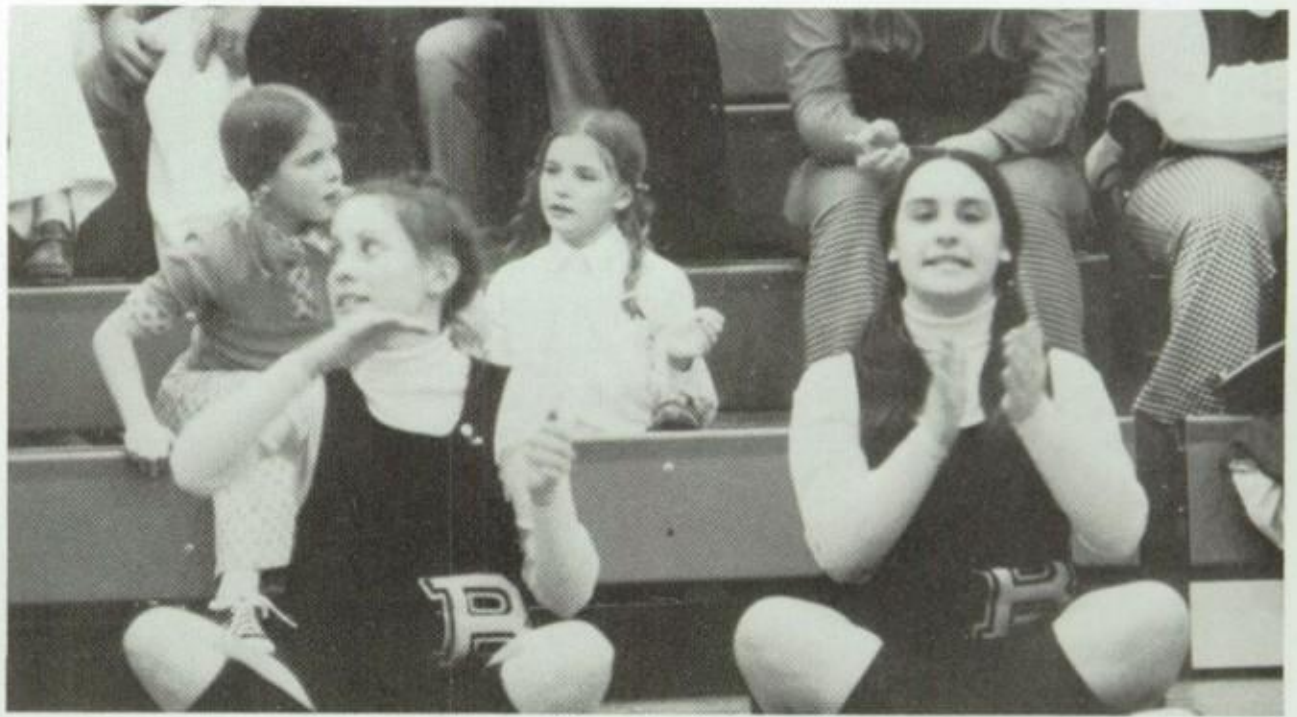

. . . the many faces which have appeared and vanished - - some remembered, some forgotten, all with some effect on our lives. The wind blows - - the leaves reluctantly swivel to the frosty ground. All is silent save the mountain stream which so long ago started high in the forest and carried us like leaves to a widening and deepening friendship with those around us. As deep as the stream may seem, the river beyond has yet greater depths.

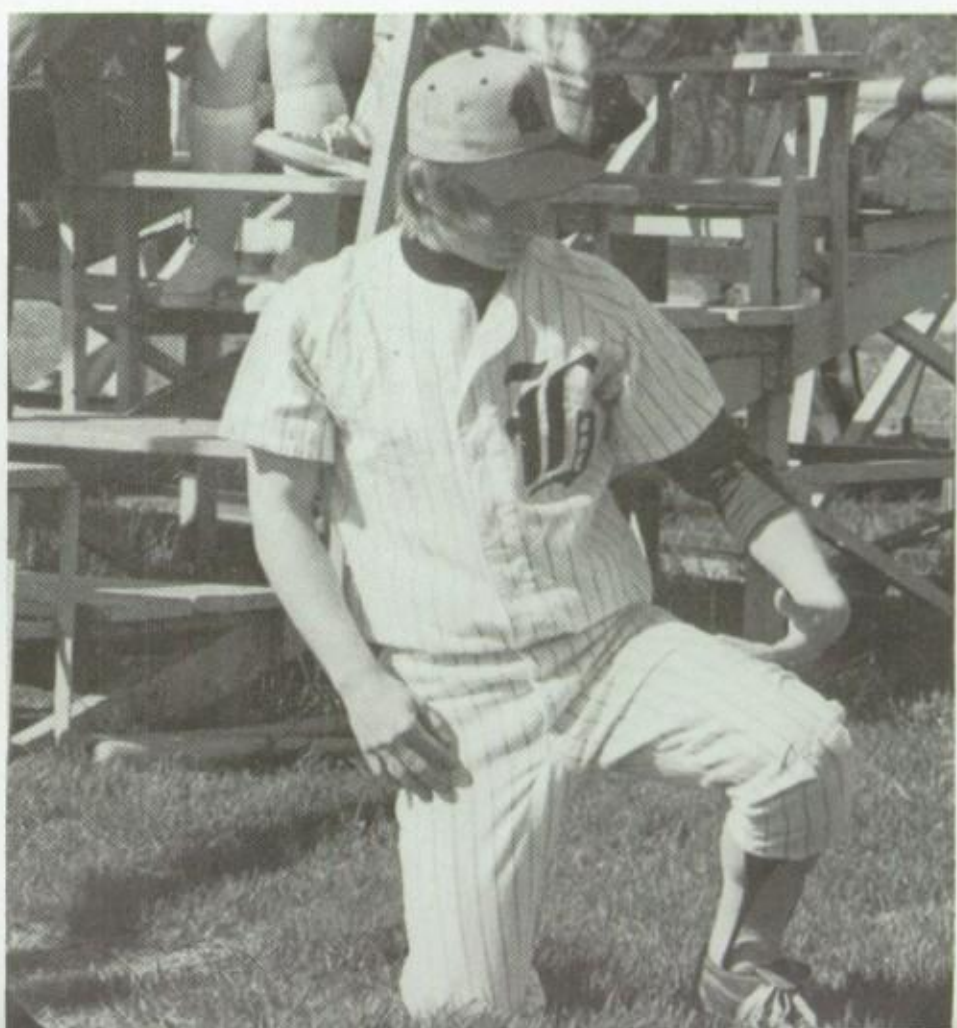

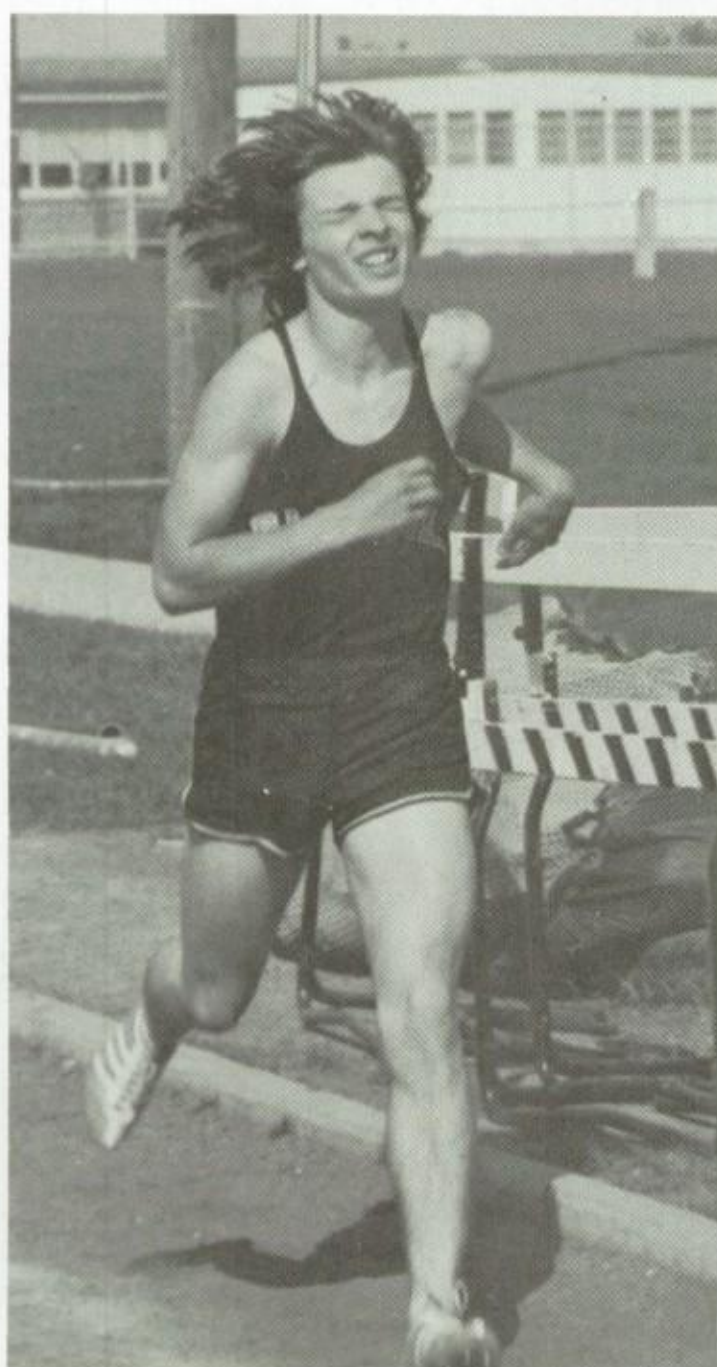

. . . the spirit of competitiveness which makes a person invigorate his body into striving for a common goal - - victory. We have known what it was to win: the joy, celebration, sense of achievement - - it was all there. We also know of defeat: the blistering agony, staggering disappointment, and oblivious reality. The same hand which was held high in victory cradled the head in defeat. Being a team meant sharing in good times and bad. Being a member of a team meant having the intestinal fortitude to stick with it and the pride to be part of it.

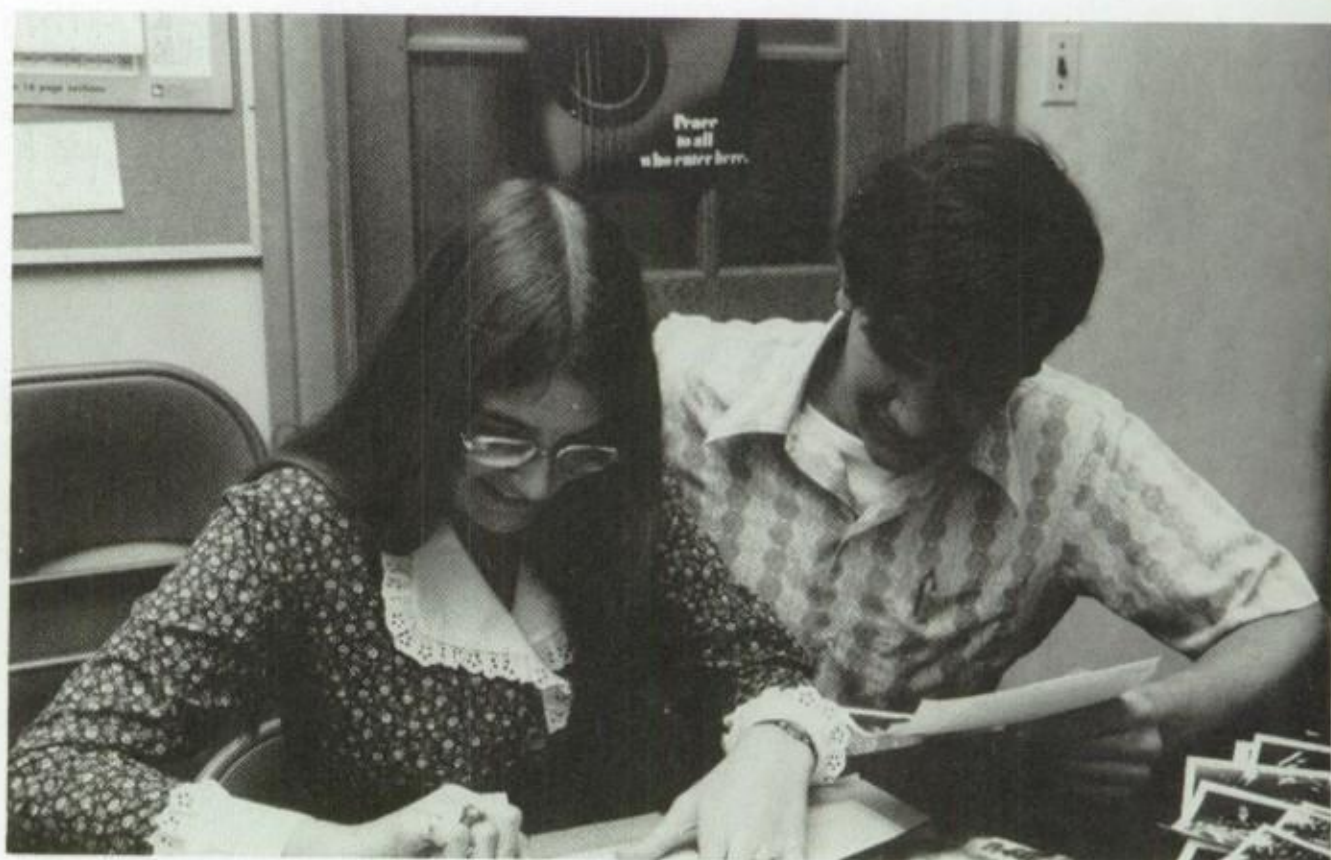

. . . the rewards of being number one or the ignominious knowledge of being only second best . . . the triumph we feel because we've earned that honor, and the knowledge that by working together as a team, we can and shall succeed!

. . . the pride of being handed a diploma. The tree has come to full bloom, with an array of wisdom and experience worth waving in the stiffest of breezes. We are now firmly rooted upon our ideals and we are constantly stretching and striving to reach novice goals. Those of us who have thirsted for knowledge have grown proportionally. Let us thirst again and be rewarded likewise.

A Note From The Editors:

Kathy and Dave

This past year was a year of change. None of us on the staff had previous experience; we were headed by a new advisor, aided by a different photographer, and printed by a new publishing company. There were some confusing moments, but there were some people who were always there to help out when we really needed it. To these people, the editors of the 1975 MIRROR would like to express much appreciation: to Mr. Patrick (of Taylor Publishing Company), our representative and suggestion-man who was always willing to help out in any way possible; to Ziegler Studios and their main photographer, Larry Kinnemen, who brought to life those everyday experiences which are remembered and cherished on the preceding pages; to those staff members who gave of their free time to piece their part of the puzzle together; and finally to Mrs. Burkhardt who spurred us on to meet deadlines and gave us valuable guidance which was needed to complete this book of memories. Thank you one and all!

*Kathy Laur
David Galloway*

Mrs. Burkhardt

What remains is a symbol of our past which will remain a memory in our future. Time alone separates us from our goal, though it is still a distant light at the end of the tunnel of life. We have trekked a long distance since the beginning of our journey, but like our predecessors, we shall attain the height of our expectations. The wind will never whisk away our impressions upon the earth because our followers are close enough behind to see the lantern in our hand. May this light be eternal . . .
